

Famous architectural archives of Shanghai

Using Shanghai as a sample, it aims to deeply interpret the city's architectural heritage and landmarks in a novel and engaging way

Uncovering the stories behind them and offering both tourists and residents a new way to explore the city.

The “Hudec Code”

Every city is like a heavy book, recording the vicissitudes of history and the accumulation of culture. Maps and buildings are the most direct codes of a city. Take Shanghai, for example. This charming international metropolis reflects its unique cultural genes and character largely through its rich and diverse architectural heritage and landmarks.

Content

PART 1

Physical Exhibition: Masterpieces of Legendary Shanghai

Architect Hudec

The exhibition will include Hudec's design sketches, architectural models, photographs, and related historical documents. Through multimedia interaction, physical displays, and commentary, it will present Hudec's design philosophy, architectural style, and his significant role in Shanghai's architectural history.

Hand-drawn Maps of Specific Streets in Shanghai

The hand-drawn maps will combine traditional tourist map elements with a modern illustration style, marking important buildings, shops, cafés, and other attractions along each street. Additionally, relevant travel information and suggestions, such as the best visiting times and transportation options, will be provided, making it easier for visitors to tour these streets and discover the stories behind them.

Famous architectural archives of Shanghai

The archive will include background information on the buildings, design features, historical changes, and current assessments. It will also display the buildings' exteriors, internal structures, and surrounding environments through a combination of text and images, allowing readers to gain an in-depth understanding of their unique charm and historical significance.
